The Sea of Faith Network is an international network of people who are interested in exploring and promoting religious faith as a wholly human creation. It includes people with both religious beliefs and none. The network was set up in the early 1980s following the showing of the BBC television series "The Sea of Faith", created and presented by Don Cupitt, the then Dean of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. This book is designed for those questioning members of traditional faith communities, and for those who have no connection with organized religion, but who refuse to abandon the search for human values to live by.
