Bible teacher Gracie Malone knows that women want to have meaningful relationships with God. But many women think that they need to spend more time and put great effort into chasing God down and fitting him into their already busy lives. Her advice to women is this: look at Christ in a new way. When Jesus taught, it was in paradoxes and riddles that always ended in unexpected ways—just like life tends to do. Jesus's teachings challenge us to live life just the opposite of what society tells us to pursue. In this twelve-week journey through the teachings of Jesus, Malone guides women, either individually or in small groups, into a deeper understanding of a God who is in control, even when it doesn't feel like it. With Malone's powerful writing, readers will discover that through this new outlook, they get a chance to do life the way God intends.
