NEW REVISED EDITION CAN BE PRE-ORDERED! Continue Your Education Improve Your Soothing Touch

Estheticians with the right knowledge and understanding are able to recognize abnormalities on the skin and can therefore become an important player in the detection of skin cancer as well as provide calming skin care treatments and products for survivors.

These same educated estheticians can help resolve oncology-related skin issues, and provide a soothing touch and relaxation for any person visiting a spa, especially if the person is living with cancer.

Read this book for more information on:

How to recognize skin abnormalities

Skin reactions to cancer therapies

Oncology drugs that react with certain ingredients in skin care Products

Understanding the lymphatic system while performing oncology massage therapy during treatment and recovery

Mandatory sanitation and infection control

Utilizing the appropriate skin care products during treatment and Recovery

Not every esthetician may choose to provide oncology esthetics; however, diseases are a part of everyday life, and education, such as what can be found in this book, should be available.
